

Customs DutyAnalyser™

Ensuring that you are not overpaying customs duty on imports is important to the bottom line. If you are currently importing goods for use in your business you could obtain a refund of overpaid customs duty for up to four years.

Importers often fail to take full advantage of existing concessional rates of duty when importing goods. Specifically, savings available through duty concessions, alternative classifications and Free Trade Agreements.

At PricewaterhouseCoopers (PwC) we utilise our in-house developed DutyAnalyser™ tool and have access to the Australian Customs Service's (ACS) complete listing of concessions and tariff precedents. In addition, we have considerable experience in achieving significant refunds for our clients, thereby providing "cash back" benefits to their businesses.

What is the Customs DutyAnalyser™?

This is a PwC exclusive, in-house developed software tool to identify instances of overpayment of customs duty on past importations, and opportunities to minimise duty payable on future importations. Importantly, the service can be conducted from our offices, without the need to tie up your resources. Initially we will utilise data obtained from the ACS (with your permission) to undertake our analysis.

The Customs DutyAnalyser™ is designed to provide you with a level of comfort that you are not overpaying customs duty on importations of goods, regardless of whether refund opportunities are identified.

As part of the analysis, we will:

- obtain your import data from the ACS
- process your data with our DutyAnalyser™ software
- analyse the reports generated by DutyAnalyser™ using our teams significant experience focusing on those goods on which customs duty has been paid
- review existing concessional mechanisms through our comprehensive and constantly updated database

- assess possible refund opportunities based on our examination and analysis of the import data
- provide a brief report summarising your import activities, total duty spent and areas of refund opportunities.
